1. A radio jamming station is located near the village church at Baneasa, a Bucharest suburb. This station is surrounded by a high fence. It operates by sending out on the air the amplified sounds of a motor. This is put on whatever wave length may be required to drown out a foreign station.
2. To teach the art of radio jamming, the Soviet authorities have sent German technicians to Rumania. They come from the Soviet zone in Germany. Their duty is to give courses in radio jamming. Their school has been created at Baneasa to train as many Rumanian technicians as may be needed for future radio jamming.
